

KEYNOTE SPEAKER

Mike McCloskey

Fun on stage. Useful on Monday.

Mike McCloskey is the Founder and CEO of HumanLytics Team, a talent optimization firm in Phoenix, Arizona. A former VP of Operations and Director of Learning at globally recognized companies, he holds an MBA from Carnegie Mellon. Mike's keynotes pair humor with live audience readbacks, so leaders leave knowing how they are wired and how to lead each person on their team.

What Are Your Drives?

Self-awareness is the first job of every leader. Mike shows the room the four drives behind how people work, reads volunteers' results live, and gives every leader one small adjustment that changes how they lead.

Stop Hiring With the Mirror Test

Most companies hire people they like, then wonder why those people leave. Mike shows how to define what a role really demands, hire for that, and build a team that stays because it wants to.

Blame Is Easy. Leadership Is Not.

When results slip, most leaders look for someone to blame. Mike shares how he learned to hold people to a standard instead of to his mood, and why the system usually fails before the person does.
